GOOD DEMAND FOR IT

Some may have felt that war bonds already would have a housing surplus when war workers left, that is not proving to be the case. Hundreds of houses went up during the war, but nowhere is there a supply equal to the demand. GIs who have returned to civilian life, married girls establishing homes of their own, families who during the war doubled up in apartments are made aware that the spare room of relatives are now setting out their own. The movement to the suburbs. The demand is keeping up. Construction has its most challenging opportunity.

THE STOCK MARKET

From The Winchester Star

Perhaps the strangest thing about the dive which the stock market took is the difficulty which the experts are having in finding a satisfactory explanation for the drop. A wide variety of reasons for the market's weakness has been advanced, ranging from international tension and fear of future strikes to dumping of stocks by foreign investors and the 100 per cent margin requirement which limits purchases to those with ready cash.

But the experts themselves do not seem to find these explanations entirely satisfying, and they are hardly sufficient to account for the worst plunge in stock values in 16 years.

Whatever the reason, there is no sense to fear that the break is the result of any depression. The demand for goods has hardly been satisfied as yet in this field or that, this time, by a tremendous amount of purchasing power. Employment is high and rising. There is no higher. All the materials are available for a period of high production lasting for several years. The outlook for profit is less rosy.

The opportunity which lies before the nation could conceivably be muffed. Another disastrous wave of strikes followed by another leap in prices could conceivably nip this postwar boom in the bud.

It seems far more likely that what the market experienced was a temporary lapse of confidence. It would be difficult to find anyone who is convinced that the postwar boom has shot its bolt before it has barely gotten under way. There is, on the contrary, reason to believe that therewill be a ready market for all the goods that can be manufactured for several years and this is the basic requirement for a prosperous economy.

NORMAL FOR FORMALS

Here are some facts about formals that every Chick and Joe should know. After all, formals are the most important events of your social careers. If you're a girl, you brood for months that you won't get a bid; then you brood for weeks that you won't get your quota of cut-ins. If you're a boy, you brood about which girl to ask and what kind of flowers to bring her. Formals certainly take a heap of worryin', but they're worth it.

It's Your Bid—She wants to be asked well in advance; none of the for a Saturday night movie. After all, she probably has to spend a new dress for the occasion, and it may take weeks to break her family down. If it's she who does the asking, give her your yes or "no" answer promptly. Don't keep her dangling until only the Drips are left. Listen, Cad, don't be late on the big night. Her ruffles wilt with her spirits if you keep her languishing around the house long after she's finished dressing. And, be sure to ask what color dress she's wearing so you can bring the right flowers. Also, if you're taking her any distance, don't think she'll enjoy hiking in a floor-length skirt and evening slicks. Better arrange ahead of time for some free wheeling.

Calling All Girls — Listen, Josephine, there's no use his trying to be a salvage station for all your cosmetics and bobby pins. Carry your own evening bag. And, don't keep fussing with yourself all evening; he wouldn't have asked you if he'd known you were going to spend the night in the dressing room. And don't watch the stag line too eagerly; he expects to be top man with you, at least for the evening.

Well, as the Optician's daughter said as she started to Lindy: "Here's where I make a spectacle of myself!"

TRIXIE TEEN SAYS:

There's a big difference between good manners and affectations. For instance, it's important to use the right knives and forks at a dinner party, but it's silly to keep your little finger curled up then. It's important to talk in a well-modulated voice, but you don't have to broadcast your "A's" like Bette Davis in a big emotional scene. Yes, you're judged by the manners you keep—but, don't make the mistake of confusing good manners with bad mannerisms.

Know Your Breed

Aberdeen Angus

By W. J. DRYDEN

History of the Aberdeen-Angus breed in the United States dates back to the importation in 1850 of a cow named "Dutchess" from Portlethen, Scotland. There is no record of any present off-springs from this cow. In 1873, George Grant, Eldon of Sunbeam, excellent type Aberdeen-Angus bull.

Victoria, Kans., imported at least three bulls and ran them with common stock. This was really the foundation of the present breed in America, although many importations have been made since that time.

The Aberdeen-Angus are bred and raised almost exclusively for beef, although some strains are fairly good milkers. They hold an enviable record in the feed lot and as fat slaughter cattle.

Control Corn Earworm By Proper Treatment

In order to prevent corn-earworm Cornell has found that an inexpensive medicinal type of mineral oil, heavy grade, will prove satisfactory. The ears should be treated after the silk has started to turn brown at the tip, from three to five days after silk first appears.

Apply the oil with an ordinary medicine dropper. Fill half full, about 20 drops, for small ears, and three-fourths full for large ears. Insert the dropper into the silk just inside the tip of the husk as shown. The oil penetrates the silk "channel" and kills the young worms as they enter.

DDT May Not Always Be Dangerous to Bees

Latest findings indicate that DDT may not be as fatal to beet as was formerly believed. It is true that if the hives are sprayed with DDT the bees will die. Tests at Michigan showed that bees in orchards which had been sprayed did as well as bees in an orchard where DDT was not applied. It was found in California tests that DDT proved no more harmful to bees than other sprays.

Nothing tells the story of our country's strength better than the sight of children at school. Multiply the scene you will witness this month by thousands. Backing up the dreams and hopes of millions of youngsters and their parents for a sound future must be reality. United States Savings Bonds are formidable chunks of reality. A few dollars saved regularly every pay day and invested in U. S. Savings Bonds have the power to provide education, business opportunity, travel, better housing, health, or any other vital asset you want for your children.

Dismantling of Camps to Make Lumber Available

WASHINGTON — Wholesale dismantling of surplus army camps and other projects to provide material for veterans' housing will begin shortly, the government announced.

The program is expected to make available enough lumber for 125,000 three bedroom houses, it was estimated informally. The over-all quantity to be obtained is officially calculated at 1½ billion board feet or more.

The salvaged lumber is due to begin flowing into housing channels within 60 days.

The engineer corps will have 15 dismantling jobs well under way by August 1, another 15 by September 1, and 20 more by October 1, the war assets administration and the national housing agency announced.

Peacetime Atom Lab to Be Located in Chicago

WASHINGTON. — Chicago is to get one of three large research laboratories to encourage application of atomic energy for civilian use.

This was revealed by the army's Manhattan district, which developed the atomic bomb. One of the laboratories will be at a site in the northeast, not yet selected, and another on the Pacific coast.

The Chicago laboratory will be located at the Argonne National laboratory, which already has a permanent staff.

The army said about 25 universities will co-operate with the Chicago laboratory.

Scientists will be trained in the development of atomic energy and then returned to their institutions to engage in further research in the fields of medicine, industry, biology and other subjects.

Yank Carrier Launches Jet Plane Five Times

ABOARD THE CARRIER FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT AT SEA.—For the first time, an all-jet plane has taken off and landed on the deck of an American flattop. The fighter, the McDonnell FD Phantom, made five takeoffs and five landings on the two and one-half acre flight deck of the carrier recently with Lt. Comdr. James J. Davidson of Rochester, Minn., at the controls.

Dozens of aeronautical experts gasped as the Phantom pulled off once after about a 400 foot run and made a climbing turn.

The Phantom weighed 6,600 pounds for the tests, but its normal combat weight is about 9,225 pounds. The craft is powered by two Westinghouse 19-inch axial flow engines and has a top speed above 500 miles an hour.

Fish Story Is Good, but He Couldn't Swallow It

NEW ORLEANS.—Franklin Larrain, 26, Cutoff, La., war veteran, dangled a freshly caught small flounder before his mouth and pretended he was going to swallow it to amuse his small daughter, Barbara Ann. Then something slipped. He was rushed here by ambulance from Grand Isle and the fish, about the size of a silver dollar, was removed from his right lung by bronchoscope.

Question Box

Charlotte: The word propaganda is frequently pronounced on the radio with a long "o" sound in the first syllable. What is the dictionary consensus?—D. W. F.

Answer: No authority, to my knowledge, sanctions or even lists the long "o" in propaganda, as PROG-pa-GAN'dah." A few American broadcasters have picked up the erroneous pronunciation from the British, some of whom affect it. I say "erroneous" for the reason that neither edition of the Oxford English dictionary, Britain's supreme authority, lists propaganda with a long "o" sound.

The correct pronunciation, in both England and America, sounds the "o" as in proper, prop, propagate. Say: PROP-uh-GAN'duh.

The word poem does not rhyme with "dome, home." It is as incorrect to say "pome" for poem as it would be to say "pote" for poet. Poem, like poet, has two syllables. The second syllable, in Standard American, is either "em" or "im." Be sure to say: POE-em; or POE-im.

Q.: During a fight broadcast, the announcer reading the commercial pronounced the word rigid with a hard "g" as in rig. Is Surely this cannot be right.—C. L.

Answer: It was doubtless a slip of the tongue. Rigid should rhyme with frigid. The "g" has the sound of "j" making the first syllable sound exactly like the word "ridge," thus: RIDGE-id.

Q.: Is there any sanction for accenting the word organization on the "gan" syllable?—D. B.

Answer: None whatever. The accents fall on the first and fourth syllables. The "a" of "gan" should be obscured, thus: OR-g i-n-ZAY'-shun.

From a Nebraska weekly: "E. M. B— ran into a fence on horseback."

Misplaced modifiers must be guarded against. Writers, especially professional writers, should carefully (and prayerfully) proofread every line so that embarrassing errors such as the foregoing may be avoided.

Trying to write "elegantly" is the cause of most bad writing. We should strive for simplicity and lucidity, avoiding long, involved sentences that become strangled by their own syntax.

Here is the horrible example to end all horrible examples. It was clipped from a newspaper article by a learned author. I have never read a more shrdluvianistical sentence: "The empirical quantum of the gravitational equation bridges the corpuscles of the material exchantology by subliminal energy received counter-clockwise out of analageous infinities."

See what I mean?

Q. The broadcaster of the Army-Notre Dame football game pronounced it "NOE-ter Dahm." What is correct?—H. W. H.

Answer: The customary American pronunciation is "NOE-truh DAHM." The name means "our lady (the Virgin Mary)." The famous cathedral in Paris is called Notre Dame de Paris, NAW-truh DAM duh pa-REE.

British Stock Up on Bread on Rationing Eve

LONDON. — British housewives rushed to the bread and cake and bakeries on the eve of bread rationing. Stores were completely sold out of bread and flour.

It was the biggest buying rush London had ever seen.

The food ministry in a midnight announcement also added oatmeal, wheat porridges, macaroni, spaghetti, pudding and cake mixtures, pearl barley and a number of other cereal products to the rationing program.

Rapid Growth Needed For Better Results

Fast Feathering Chicks Cut Down Feed Bills

By W. J. DRYDEN

Efficient, rapid growth is best measured by the weight of the bird at an early age. Studies of the USDA on the growth of cockerels have indicated that the greatest variability occurs between 3 and 6 weeks of age, if a good diet is fed and the cockerels have access to direct sunlight and the equivalent of free range. This is the best period in which to make accurate selection of the most efficient birds by their body weights. At this age, Dr. Charles W. Knox of the USDA says there are maximum differences in weight between the slowest growing, the average, and the fastest growing individuals. The lesson from these experiments would indicate that culling should start when the chicks are still in the brooder stage. As Professor Rice once said —a real poultryman has the eye to cull and the heart to discard. Culling is an art of Optiscan—the art to see and the will to discard.

Four Brothers Evaded War by Hiding in Attic

Give Up When Warned a Nation-Wide Hunt Was Being Organized.

CHICAGO—The strange story of how four brothers, sons of a Du Page county farmer, spent 47 months hiding in a tiny attic room in their Ontariaville home in Du Page county to avoid the draft was brought to light when the brothers voluntarily surrendered to Federal Bureau of Investigation in Chicago.

Each of the brothers was sentenced to three years in the federal penitentiary.

In passing sentence, Judge Buy of the federal district court said: "The thing that amazes me is to find four brothers all equally disloyal. Your actions were certainly cowardly in letting others fight for you. If you'd done this in Austria, from where your family came, you'd have been shot."

The brothers, pale but showing no other ill effects from their long confinement, appeared at FBI offices after their father, Charles Gabriel, was warned federal agents were on a nation-wide search was being organized.

FBI Agent Edward W. Halloran, who has been working on the case for two years, said the brothers escaped detection by barricading themselves in a tiny room in a corner of the Gabriel two-story frame house on the outskirts of Ontariaville, 10 miles southeast of Elgin.

Mother Helped Out.

As soon as FBI agents appeared, Halloran said, the brothers, Albert, 40; Frank, 29; Henry, 26, and Ernest, 23, would draw a curtain across the single window in the attic room. Downstairs their father and mother, Josephine, would prepare to enact a dramatic scene.

Mrs. Gabriel would feign illness and fall across a bed in a faint. The elder Gabriel then would expose a cancerous wound on his neck and pretend that he was nearly unable to talk. In response to questions by FBI men about the whereabouts of his sons he would only mumble replies that they had disappeared years before.

Although a close watch was kept on the place, farm agents failed to see the brothers because they would leave their room only on moonless nights to exercise by running up and down a cow path on a lonely part of the farm.

The brothers began their flight from army service on the day after Albert received a notice to report for induction on July 6, 1942. At that time they formed a pact to hide out together and protect one another from induction because their religious beliefs did not allow them to fight. The younger brothers never registered for the draft.

Savings Are Spent.

Taken before United States Commissioner Edwin K. Walker by Assistant United States Attorney John A. Looby Jr., Albert pleaded guilty to a charge of failing to report for induction and was ordered held under a $5,000 bond. The three younger brothers pleaded guilty to charges of failing to register for the draft and also were held under $5,000 bonds.

The family told Looby that they spent their entire savings of $1,500 to provide food and clothing for the four boys. The youngest brother, Ernest, is a cripple, FBI agents said, and probably would not have been taken by the army or navy.

At his home the elder Gabriel said he could not read, and professed to be unaware that the war is over. He has no radio, and said his sons seldom talked with him. Gabriel, a pensioned railroad employee, formerly lived in Chicago.

Britain Opens Luxury Gates to Banned Goods

WASHINGTON. — The British board of trade opened the gates recently to renewed imports of 34 miscellaneous types of U. S. merchandise which had been banned under wartime controls.

High in interst to women in England were ladies' felt hats, artificial silk clothing, lipstick and rouge, face powder and other cosmetics, all difficult to obtain when the accent was on "austerity."

U. S. producers, under an agreement announced by the board of trade and the department of commerce, may ship to Britain annually 20 per cent of their average during 1936-37-38. They may ship two-thirds of an annual quota for the remaining months of 1946.

U. S. Warns Against Danger in 2 New Drugs

WASHINGTON. — A danger area in which the new drug streptomycin increases rather than decreases deaths from infection was reported by United States food and drug administrative researchers.

Penicillin, another war-born drug, may also have this effect, the report added on the basis of preliminary studies.

In tests on more than 2,000 mice, the scientists found the amount of streptomycin used determined whether the drug killed or cured. Disease-fighting concentrations lie relatively close to those that stimulate disease.
